Safe haven: Denied

- Mexican man holding out hope for last-minute intervention to stop family's deportation
 ► Will launch appeal from Mexico ► Carjacking victim critical of Tories' new refugee bill

A local refugee who worries his family will be killed when they are deported to Mexico this month wants the federal government to know his home country isn't "safe."

"I got shot on my face," said Uziel Cuautle, who has a scar on his left cheek. It happened during a carjacking in Mexico City in 2007. The same bullet killed his girlfriend.

Cuautle said he disagrees with the Protecting Canada's Immigration System Act.

The new bill would allow the government to designate “safe countries, and refugees from those places would face shorter asylum-application times and be barred from appealing Immigration and Refugee Board decisions.

"They need to do a better job with families like us," Cuautle said. "We're working, we do good things in this country."

Each refugee claim should be assessed individually, he said, adding that if the bill passes, Mex-

Soon after the carjacking, police warned Cuautle that the people behind it threatened to kill or kidnap him and his family — and they offered no protection.

he said.

Cuautle fled with his family, first to the U.S., then to Canada. This month, their claim was denied. They have been ordered to leave by Feb. 23.

They will move somewhere other than Mexico City, but don't know if they will be safe. News reports over the past three years have him worried about Mexico in general, he said.

Cyclist's death means upgraded charges

JOE LOFARO
@METRONEWS.CA

A 31-year-old cyclist who was struck by a vehicle on Feb. 2 died in hospital Sunday, Ottawa police say.

Nathan Anderson was riding his bike on Carling Avenue near Archibald Street at about 2:15 p.m. when a car struck him. He was transported to hospital with a life-threatening head injury and listed in critical condition.

Police witnessed the collision as they responded to a call about an impaired driver who had been refused alcohol at an LCBO at the Hampton Park Plaza. Glen Carkner, 44, of Ottawa was charged with dangerous driving causing bodily harm and impaired operation of a motor vehicle.

Those charges will be upgraded in light of Anderson's death, police said.

Carkner was released from jail on $32,000 bond on Feb. 9.

Events for the family

► Winterlude, skate with the mayor among free activities

JOE LOFARO
@METRONEWS.CA

Ontario's newest holiday — Family Day — is here once again, and there are lots of indoor and outdoor activities out there for families.

Today marks the last day of Winterlude, and while the Rideau Canal skateway might remain closed, visitors can still enjoy the fun off the ice.

The Rogers Crystal Garden in Confederation Park is to open from 9 a.m. to 6 p.m. and the Snowflake Kingdom in Jacques Cartier

Park in Gatineau will also be open.

More free events will be held at the National Arts Centre, where the English Theatre will host the second annual Family Day celebration for kids aged five and up and their families.

"We were really blown away by how popular the event was last year," said Judi Pearl of the NAC's English Theatre. "This year it's going to be even bigger."

The entire lobby area will be transformed into a play area that includes paper-boat making, a bake sale, Algonquin birch-bark canoe building, a hip-hop dance workshop and a giant, five-foot-high maze.

"It's quite an educational day, I think, but really the focus is on fun," said Pearl.

More events

- Skate with the mayor on the Rink of Dreams at Marion Dewar Plaza. 11:30 a.m.
- Local museums will celebrate Ottawa's history for Heritage Week.
- Monday is the last day of the Funatorium Explorium at the CE Centre on Uplands Drive.

Open or closed?

- OC Transpo buses will run on a revised weekday schedule on Monday with minor reductions. For information on the Family Day schedule, check octranspo.com.
- All branches of the Ottawa Public Library will be closed Monday.
- There will be no curbside green bin, recycling or garbage pickup on Monday. Collection will be delayed one day for the week.
- Most shopping malls will be closed Monday. However, the Rideau Centre will be open from 10 a.m. to 6 p.m.

Elizabeth Smart marries in Hawaii

Elizabeth Smart, the young woman from Utah who was kidnapped at 14 and held captive for nine months by an itinerant street preacher, married her Scottish fiancé Saturday at a Mormon temple in Hawaii.

A family spokesman said she married Matthew Gilmour, of Aberdeen, Scotland, on Oahu's North Shore.

The 24-year-old Smart is in her last year at Brigham Young University.

She met Gilmour while doing Mormon missionary work in Paris.

The couple wed at the Laie Hawaii Temple of The Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints in front of a small group of family members, spokesman Chris Thomas said in a statement. The group then celebrated at a private reception and luau.

Smart and Gilmour got engaged last month and made plans to wed this summer. However, Smart opted to move up the ceremony because of the media attention her engagement was getting, Thomas said.

Australia reopens dingo-baby case

The growl came first, low and throaty, piercing the darkness that had fallen across the remote Australian desert. A baby's cry followed, then abruptly went silent.

Inside the tent, the infant girl had vanished. Outside, her mother was screaming: "The dingo's got my baby!"

With those panicked words, the mystery of Azaria Chamberlain's disappearance in the Australian Outback in 1980 became the most notorious, divisive and baffling legal drama in the country's history. Had a wild dog really taken the baby? Or had Azaria's mother, Lindy, slit her daughter's throat and buried her in the desert?

Thirty-two years later, Australian officials hope to finally, definitively, determine how Azaria died when the Northern Territory coroner opens a fourth inquest Friday.

Lindy Chamberlain, who was convicted of murdering her daughter and later cleared, is still waiting for authorities to get to the bottom of the case that made her the most hated person in Australia.

Some children are placed in foster care without full safety checks while others wind up in supervised apartments or overcrowded homes, say child advocates, who warn of a deepening crisis across the country. "There are problems when you hear people from the front line talking about the fact that we're placing kids in homes where the study hasn't been done," said Peter Dudding, executive director of the Child Welfare League of Canada. "We've got kids being placed in homes where the home is over the allowable number of children. This is just wrong. And it's dangerous."

Anonymous threatens Toews over Bill C-30

- Hackers demand Public Safety Minister Vic Toews resign in video
- Bill C-30 would give cops easier access to people's Internet lives

JOE LOFARO
@METRONEWS.CA

Hacker group Anonymous is demanding Canada's Public Safety Minister Vic Toews put an end to proposed Internet-surveillance legislation, Bill C-30, and resign, or they say they will release information during "Operation White North."

In a video uploaded Thursday, the group speaks out against Bill C-30, which critics say would give police too much snooping power and violate Canadians' privacy.

If passed, the bill would allow authorities to demand Internet-service providers to hand over subscriber information such as name, email address and Internet Protocol (IP) address without a warrant.

The video features an image of a masked man

"These attacks, which have included criminal acts and threats of criminal acts against me and my family, have been referred to the police for investigation."

and a computerized voice-over that talks about the Protecting Children from Internet Predators Act.

"All this legislation does is give your corrupted government more power to control its citizens," the voice said.

"We know all about you, Mr. Toews, and during Operation White North we will release what we have unless you scrap this bill."

Another individual that appears to be unaffiliated with Anonymous already published alleged details of the minister's divorce on a Twitter account (@Vikileaks30).

Toews called for an investigation into the matter after the Ottawa Citizen reported that the posts were coming from an IP address linked to the House of Commons.

The account appeared to be voluntarily shut down on Friday, however.

Following the Twitter posts, the Winnipeg Free Press obtained an open letter Toews wrote to his constituents which said he has been the victim of "extensive personal" attacks by his political opponents.

Toews said Bill C-30 will bypass the second reading and head to committee, where potential amendments to the piece of legislation could be made.

Opposition forces gain footing in Syria

Gunmen in Syria staged a guerrilla-style ambush that killed a senior state prosecutor and a judge Sunday in an attack that suggested armed factions are growing bolder and more co-ordinated in their uprising against President Bashar Assad's regime.

The roadway slayings — reported in an opposition-dominated northern region by the Syrian state news agency — came a day after a deadly hit-and-run attack on a political figure in the heart of the pro-Assad city of Aleppo.

The targeted killings have not reached Assad's inner circle, but they indicate a growing shift toward violent tactics by the opposition as it brings aboard

Canada needs to defend Arctic: Navy

The head of the Royal Canadian Navy says Canada needs to bolster its military presence in the Arctic to prepare for a boom in human and economic activity resulting largely from climate change.

The gradual disappearance of sea ice is opening up commercial shipping as well as previously inaccessible areas rich with oil, natural gas and mineral resources. "I know that major shipping companies are planning now to be able to have ships that are first-year ice capable sailing out of Singapore and over the pole into Rotterdam," said Vice-Admiral Paul Maddison, commander of the Royal Canadian Navy. "That's a game changer, in my view."

The Conservative government's national ship-building strategy includes new icebreakers and Arctic off-shore patrol ships. Maddison said the first patrol ship is expected in 2015.

China bank to lower ratio to free up funds

LENDING. China's central bank will lower the ratio of funds that banks must hold as reserves in a move that frees tens of billions of dollars for lending and aims to help spur slowing economic growth. The reserve-requirement ratio for major commercial banks will be decreased on Friday to 20.5 per cent from 21 per cent, the People's Bank of China said Saturday on its website. The cut frees money for lending at a time when the growth rate is expected to drop from last quarter's 8.9 per cent to closer to eight per cent. The cut is the second in two months.

Iran halts oil shipments

RETALIATION. Iran has halted oil shipments to Britain and France, the Oil Ministry said Sunday, in an apparent pre-emptive blow against the EU after the bloc imposed sanctions on Iran's crucial fuel exports. The EU imposed tough sanctions against Iran last month, which included a freeze of the country's central bank assets and an oil embargo set to begin in July. Iran's Oil Minister Rostam Qassemi had warned earlier this month that Tehran could cut off oil exports to "hostile" European nations. The 27-nation EU accounts for about 18 per cent of Iran's oil exports. The EU sanction, along with others from the U.S., are part of efforts to derail Iran's disputed nuclear program.

TROUBLE SPOTTING TROUBLE

URBAN COMPASS

STEVE COLLINS
METRO OTTAWA

Anticipating the source of any given day's trouble can be tricky. For two weeks, I put off calling my Internet-service provider to make a simple technical change because of previous "head-bang-wall" experiences in chasing the company's so-called customer-service reps through thickets of voice-activated help menus.

But when I finally gritted my teeth and dialed last week, it took only two short, productive calls — they only tried for the upsell twice — and a techie was dispatched the same day. Other glitch-prone situations, a misunderstanding with the Canada Revenue Agency and repairs to my old brute of a laptop, also went hiccup-free; a trifecta of trouble averted, despite my stubborn pessimism.

"With provincial trouble mostly forestalled, we can go back to worrying about the effect of federal job cuts on Ottawa and its 100,000 government workers."

Don Drummond's report to the provincial government last Wednesday also looked like it could bring trouble. Cities are dependant on the province, and whatever the former bank economist and federal bureaucrat prescribed could reasonably be expected to pinch municipalities.

Mayor Jim Watson, though, found himself expressing relief overall that few of Drummond's deficit-busting recommendations seem to involve sticking it to our city. A slower timetable for uploading social-service costs from the cities, currently to be completed by 2018, was the only prospect that caused him any budgetary nervousness.

Smaller hits lurk in Drummond's proposals, like cutting the municipal take from slot machines. The one-armed bandits at Rideau-Carleton Raceway have contributed about $40 million to the city, so far.

But as the consultant taketh away, he also giveth, with an idea to let the city lean more heavily on those who owe it money by adding outstanding tickets and fines to property-tax bills.

With provincial trouble mostly forestalled, we can go back to worrying about the effect of federal job cuts on Ottawa and its 100,000 government workers.

Postscript: My day's trouble materialized, from a familiar source, on my way home with that freshly repaired laptop. I perched carefully on the glazed curbside berm of ice and cigarette butts at the bus stop, holding out my tickets and making what I thought was unrelenting eye contact with the approaching bus driver — only to watch him whiz right by.

I saved two tickets, got a half-hour's exercise and considered that OC Transpo's unsung gift to urban sustainability may be selling more prospective passengers on walking and biking. (Apologies to readers who were anticipating a column featuring fewer of my petty problems, but you never know where a day's trouble will come from.)

Aretha Franklin remembers Whitney Houston in show at Radio City Music Hall in NYC

The legacy of Whitney

METRO WORLD NEWS IN NEW YORK

As Whitney Houston's funeral took place this past Saturday, the tragedy of her death is still fresh in our minds. However, Houston, like Michael Jackson, may have a legacy that can outlive our collective memory of her somewhat tainted past.

But that doesn't happen on its own. There are professionals who specialize in the act of "sanitizing" the image of a deceased celebrity. "The estates of dead celebrities these days are so savvy and there's a handful of people that manage it in Hollywood," explains Jo Piazza, author of Celebrity Inc. How Famous People Make Money. "Whitney's estate will likely sign on with one of them because they know what to do to kind of sanitize a celebrity who has died in an unsavory way. They're also bulldogs to make sure that the image is not used in a way that is one, not profitable for them and two, will continue to damage the brand in perpetuity."

Piazza notes that Michael Jackson's estate used the same experts that had worked on Elvis Presley's estate after he died. Many may forget that Presley also died young and, on the toilet. But Jackson and Presley at the top two dead celebrity earners. Why? Because they present branding that allows new generations to become fans and then, consumers.

"Michael Jackson's estate benefited from the fact that Conrad Murray was convicted," she says. "That kind of clears his name and de-stigmatizes him going forward. The way Whitney Houston died, that's not a family-friendly way to die. And if you die in an un-family friendly way, similar to Amy Winehouse, it's hard for parents to encourage that next generation of consumers to sign on to this brand."

► Will Whitney Houston become a top deceased celebrity earner like Michael Jackson and Elvis Presley?

Elvis Presley's respective Cirque du Soleil shows, in addition to Presley's Graceland, not only generate big money for their estates, but indoctrinate new generations as fans of their music.

But can Houston manage to overcome the same sort of branding crisis? Piazza doesn't think so. "I don't think that her brand was as strong as Jackson and Presley's," she says. "I don't think that she had a strong enough catalogue in one genre to be able to do anything in perpetuity."

Piazza also notes that because Houston did not write her songs, she also stands to make less money from her catalogue going forward.

Dorothy Pomerantz is an entertainment journalist for Forbes Magazine and compiles the annual list of top-earning dead celebrities. She takes a more hopeful perspective on the future of Houston's legacy.

The amount Houston's estate may earn in the next 12 months according to estimates by Forbes Magazine.

Houston died was incredibly sad, but what's going to matter is how her heirs and her estate managers handle her name going forward," Pomerantz says. "There's no reason that something similar [to the success of Presley and Jackson] couldn't happen with Whitney Houston after her estate and her name have had room to separate from the way she died. Five years from now, will Whitney be remembered for her grace and for her songs? Or will she be remembered for dying from whatever comes out in the autopsy? It takes PR and smart planning and smart work. There's potential there."

On casting a Houston biopic

We asked movie critic for Fandango.com Grae Drake to speculate as to who could play the key roles in a Whitney Houston biopic if one were to be made today. But Drake warned us first, that the public will need distance from her death in order to appreciate a fictionalized retelling of her life. "Biopics usually do better when people have had time to forget what it was like to live through it in the news," she says.

Young vamps

Vampires have come to Dundurn, Sask.

The small town is the setting for the new movie Rufus, a coming-of-age teen vampire drama written, directed and produced out of Saskatoon.

It stars Canadian actress Kelly Rowan, best known from the hit TV show The O.C.; Saskatchewan native Kim Coates from Sons of Anarchy; and British newcomer Rory Saper as Rufus, a lonely teen fanger who longs to be human.

Producer Anand Ramayya says director David Schultz visited many towns before choosing Dundurn as the kind of place where his young vampire protagonist could "try to find himself."

Dad guns down daughter's laptop after Facebook rant

42 ways to make someone happy

Some are clever, some are obvious — and you could be doing all of them for friends, family and even co-workers

1 Smile. Try it this morning on the subway.

2 Help carry something home from the grocery store

3 Send a thank-you email. Even if it's just thanking a friend for being alive.

4 Call just to see how they're doing.

5 Yes, even your mom. Especially your mom.

6 Pick them flowers.

7 Cook them a nice meal.

8 Try a fish dish — the Omega-3s will brighten their mood.

9 Or if you're really lazy, peel and slice an orange — no one loves doing that, you get all sticky for them.

10 Tell a joke.

11 Try this one from Chris Rock: "People are starving all over the world, what do you mean, 'Red meat will kill you'? Don't eat no red meat? No, don't eat no green meat. If you lucky enough to get your hands on a steak, bite the crap out of it!"

12 Surprise them with a clean house.

13 Write a love letter to a loved one.

14 Extra points for not quoting another author.

15 Give them a cherished book.

16 Bake cookies.

17 Praise them publicly.

18 Just not on Facebook, if they're not into that. Keep it amongst friends.

19 Thank a co-worker for a job well done.

20 Listen.

21 Be there when they're in need.

22 Give someone an unexpected hug.

23 Spend time with them.

24 Get into a TV series together. We recommend Community or Breaking Bad on DVD.

25 Do errands or chores for them.

26 Say I love you. Again, only to someone who might want you to.

27 Be proud of them.

28 Babysit if they need it.

29 House sit if they need you to.

30 Help them get ahead.

31 Focus on their weaknesses and offer solutions. One friend who had trouble managing his workload loved rescuetime.com, a site that increases your productivity by segmenting your hours.

32 If you're a co-worker, write a testimonial on someone's LinkedIn page.

33 Buy them movie tickets.

34 Create a care package.

35 Include chocolate.

36 Coffee. Mmmm.

37 List the things you love about them.

38 Secretly leave them thank-you notes.

39 ...in places that will surprise them, like in the medicine cabinet, their shoes, a jewellery box, the back of a closet.

40 Give a back rub when appropriate.

41 Deliver a nice lunch to them. Just nothing processed, as those foods have been shown to induce depression.

42 Love them, completely. LEO BABAUTA/ZENHABITS.NET/METRO PANEL

Your alarm clock broke. Your electric toothbrush fizzled out. Your microwave oven isn't big enough and it's time for a replacement.

What, exactly, are we supposed to do with our broken or obsolete small appliances?

In British Columbia, there's a new, province-wide program called Unplugged. It is already diverting a significant number of unwanted gizmos away from overtaxed landfill sites.

"It provides a free collection and recycling system available to all British Columbians, where they can drop off and have their small appliances recycled," says Jordan Best of the Canadian Electrical Stewardship Association.

"We have over 120 depots across British Columbia, where people can take their small appliances to be dropped off."

Toasters, blenders and irons all contain materials that can be usefully recycled, which could become dangerously toxic buried forever in the ground.

And the numbers are staggering. It's estimated that British Columbians throw out an astronomical two million such devices every year.

"Half the battle is just getting people aware that the program exists," Best explains. "I don't think there is anyone that is particularly excited about throwing their electric toothbrush or hair dryer or microwave in the garbage. People don't get any benefit from that. It really doesn't take much more effort to drop it off at the recycling depot."

The program is paid for through modest recycling fees charged on the purchase of any new device. Drop-off — anywhere in the province — is simple, and free.

"Our target is to collect and recycle as many of these as we can, keep them out of the landfill, and obviously to achieve a better en-

Right now, Unplugged is only available in British Columbia. But the business model is simple and streamlined, and should be easy to duplicate should the B.C. program prove an effective, popular success.

"It's been going well," notes Best. "We've had over 100 tons collected each month that the program has been operating. That's a lot of tonnage. We think, we hope and we assume that those numbers will increase in the coming years."

Well, that depends on your preference of hard versus soft — boar bristles are stiffer than horse hair! I'm half kidding.

Until 1938, toothbrushes had bone handles and animal hair bristles. Today, nylon bristles adorn plastic handles and most of us send at least four of these to the landfill each year.

On a plastic diet but not vegan? You could try the boar hair bristle option. Two reviews I dug up: "you get used to the wet pig taste" and "gross."

Another plastic-free option is The Environmental Toothbrush™ from Australia. Its bamboo handle and polymer bristles are compostable and biodegradable.

In Vancouver, you can find them at The Soap Dispensary on Main Street for five bucks.

Relationships at home, with peers key to teens' mental health: Study

► Students who reported stronger relationships also reported a healthier state of mental health

Interpersonal relationships at home, school and with peers appear to be critical for positive mental health among young Canadian teens, a major study suggests.

The survey-based examination of more than 26,000 students in Grades 6 to 10 is the latest in a series of studies since 1989-90 that takes the pulse of Canadian adolescents for comparison with their peers of the same age in more than 40 other countries.

"We focused it on mental health for a reason," said John Freeman, director of the social program evaluation group at Queen's University, and a study co-author. "Mental health is a large issue for Canada's young people right now. It's in our conversations ... it's in the news."

Freeman said that as obvious as it may seem, relationships with others are a key indicator as to whether a teen is mentally healthy.

The study, based on responses to questionnaires given to students during class time, examined how relationships with parents, teachers and peers reflect on mental health status.

"And we found consistently, no matter which group we looked at, even with neighbourhoods as well, that relationships

Mental health

The study also found:

- Mental health suffers as young people move from Grade 6 through 10, especially for girls.
- Higher proportions of young people reported being bullied. Freeman said the study suggests about 60 per cent of respondents had been victims of various kinds of bullying.
- Alcohol and cannabis are the most commonly used substances among Canadian youth. A significant percentage of students have used alcohol and cannabis at least once by the time they reach Grade 10.

mattered," Freeman said. "Those students who reported stronger relationships also reported better indices of mental health."

While adults often believe that teens' most critical relationships are with people their own age, Freeman said the study found that connections with adults also are important.

For instance, adolescents who reported finding it "very difficult" or "difficult" to converse with their mother are far more likely to have high levels of emotional problems than those who find it "easy" or "very easy" to talk to their moms.

And the study revealed a similar finding when it came to the ease or difficulty for a teen to speak to their fathers.

For boys, 45 per cent of those who reported difficulty conversing with their father were among those with the highest level of emotional problems, while 58 per cent of girls who had trouble talking to their dads were in that group.

Significant proportions of both boys and girls who found it difficult to communicate with their mothers also showed a high level of emotional problems relative to their peers — 49 per cent of boys and 66 per cent of girls.

Overall, the study found that more young adolescents felt their parents understood them, compared to studies in previous years, although about three in 10 believed their parents expected too much of them, generally and at school.

While the 2010 international study on teens is not yet published, Freeman said the previous two reports in 2006 and 2002 showed that Canadian youth had the highest cannabis use compared to peers in other countries.

The Canadian study, sponsored in large part by the Public Health Agency of Canada, shows 40 per cent of boys and 37 per cent of girls in Grade 10 had tried marijuana.

Remaking the music industry

BOOK REVIEW

CRAIG LUND
LIFE@METRONews.CA

Fortune's Fool,
By Fred Goodman;
Simon & Schuster,
$36.00,
286 pages.

Behind every billionaire lies a story.

Take the Bronfman family, who got their start in the business of liquor sales during prohibition.

Fred Goodman's book, which is actually a story about the music business and the purchase by Edgar Bronfman Jr. of Warner Music Group, paints a salacious tale of a family of heirs gunning to outdo their predecessors, ultimately dismantling an empire with about as much sentimentality as they showed in the selling of the Seagram building in 1978 for a cool $75 million.

"Everything at Seagram, no matter how singular or closely tied to the Bronfman family legend, was for sale at the right price," writes Goodman.

There is no arguing that the music business is not what it used to be. The confusion comes when a billionaire takes a (seemingly) losing bet on an industry to the tune of a few billion dollars, divesting some solid Dupont stock to boot.

This book takes a close look at Edgar Bronfman Jr.'s efforts to remake the music industry as an Internet-friendly business, including controversial artist agreements that take revenue cuts from streams formally exclusive to the artists.

Rotation the key for Jays

► As team gets ready to begin spring training, hopes for future hang on starting pitching

All eyes watching the Blue Jays, whose reporting dates for spring training finally arrive this week, are expected to focus on a key area over the next six weeks: Starting pitching.

As club president Paul Beeston recently noted, the club will "go as far as its starting pitching" allows it to go. With the organization eyeing itself as more and more competitive this year through 2015, starting pitching will become the foundation upon which all that promise will rest.

As spring training finally arrives — reporting dates are Wednesday for pitchers and catchers and Saturday for the full squad — starting pitching is the one area of the team in which there could be an honest and interesting competition.

Others include the battle for left field — between Travis Snider and Eric ► Kyle Drabek could be an interesting wild card. The Jays coaching staff have worked with him on his delivery and his tendency to get overly serious and try to throw too hard when he gets into trouble.

► Cecil is expected to come to camp reflecting the benefits of an off-season weight loss and training regimen.

► Alvarez's solid showing as a call-up last year and McGowan's triumphant return to the majors after several years of shoulder battles should keep those two on the inside track.

see jockeying, depending on how many left-handers the club sees fit to carry.

There are, of course, many other intangibles with the roster. You'd expect a spot will be made for Omar Vizquel.

But this spring should be largely about starting pitching. It will also be about sorting out those other battles while giving a long look at some of the organization's brightest prospects for the future.

Consider that GM Alex Anthopoulos took heat for what was perceived as a disappointing winter. The Jays lost out on Yu Darvish. They bowed out of the Prince Fielder chase, based on the organization's policy of a five-year limit on rich free-agent contracts. They were rebuffed by other free agents and trade potentials like Koji Uehara and Roy Oswalt.

Those developments followed the winter of 2010, when the organization also met with rejections from free agents Carl Crawford and Cliff Lee.

Anthopoulos' five-year rule on free agents, though, is in fact well-founded. Many industry experts feel that once a player with a multi-year deal (Fielder signed for nine years) reaches 30, a club is actually signing him through declining years.

The Jays also continue to rank (with Tampa and San Diego) as one of the best developmental organizations in baseball and to make strides in Latin America. Once that stockpile of talent arrives over the next year or two, the club should be in position to spend or trade for a superstar player who could put them over the top as true contenders.

This spring training, while primed to sort out those positional battles, will bring that stockpile of future talent into the immediate picture like never before. This spring is about not only 2012 but about the next two to three seasons to come.

CFL legend Murphy passes away

DAVE BUSTON/THE CANADIAN PRESS

► Cal Murphy holds the Grey Cup after coaching his Winnipeg Blue Bombers to a win over the Hamilton Tiger-Cats in the 1984 Grey Cup game in Edmonton.

► 'Cal Murphy lived and breathed and loved football': Commissioner Cohon

He was part of nine Grey Cup-winning teams as an assistant coach, head coach and CFL general manager. He's a member of the Canadian Football Hall of Fame and since 2000 had been evaluating talent for the Indianapolis Colts.

On Saturday night, Cal Murphy died. He was 79.

Murphy died in hospital in Regina, where he lived with his wife Joyce. He had been admitted there earlier in the month after suffering broken ribs in a fall.

"Everyone in both the immediate and extended, Blue Bomber family is deeply saddened by this news," Winnipeg president Garth Buchko said. "Cal was a great ambassador for

"He will be greatly missed by all, but his contributions will remain with us for many years to come."

our game and for Canadian football in Winnipeg and Manitoba.

"Our thoughts and prayers are with his family at this time."

Murphy had a history of heart trouble. In February 2010, he was admitted into a Regina hospital with a heart ailment and for a time was on life support.

"He was a fierce competitor, with a keen eye for talent and an ability to mould great teams," CFL commissioner Mark Cohon said in a statement.

ances, winning three.

"Cal was one of the most influential figures in our organization's history, and that dates back over 80 years," said Bombers GM Joe Mack, who worked with Murphy in Winnipeg from 1984-1987.

But Murphy was also seen as hopelessly old-fashioned when he banned reporters from the Bombers dressing room after CBC radio assigned a woman to the football beat.

Murphy was a driving force behind the successful bid to bring the Grey Cup game to Winnipeg for the first time in 1991, a move that may have saved the community-owned franchise. THE CANADIAN PRESS
